

Alzada Lowe Sams

July 14, 1949 - September 25, 2025

Alzada Lowe Sams, affectionately known as “Zada,” was born on July 14, 1949, in Birmingham, Alabama, to the late Annie Mae Lowe and David Sams.

Alzada was a graduate of George Washington Carver High School in Birmingham, Alabama. She later became certified in Sales, preparing her for a successful professional career. As a young adult, she relocated to Boston, Massachusetts, where she began working as a Data Entry Analyst at the Boston Naval Shipyard in Charlestown. She remained there until the base closed in 1974. During her working years, she was also employed in the childcare field.

Alzada later joined John Hancock Insurance Company in Boston, where she dedicated 22 years of service before retiring early. Her work ethic and commitment were evident throughout her career.

Alzada enjoyed a variety of interests and activities. She loved attending concerts, reading, making trips to the local library, meeting new people, and playing bingo and the lottery. She was a proud 50-year resident of the Piano Craft Guild, also known as the Piano Factory, where she truly enjoyed living life. Known for having her own way of doing things, Alzada was an independent thinker who lived on her own terms.

On Thursday, September 25, 2025, Alzada peacefully transitioned from this life. She was preceded in death by her mother, Annie Mae Lowe; her father, David Sams; and her brother, James Lowe Jr.

She leaves to cherish everlasting love and memories, a host of nieces, nephews, cousins, and friends.
